Economic Inquiry 2009 Editor's Report

The 2009 volume of Economic Inquiry consists of 54 papers in a wide variety and diverse set of fields, including microeconomics, macroeconomics, and empirical studies.

Since my last report, the regular co-editors are the same. Among the specialized co-editors, we replaced Lawrence Kahn, for sports economics, with Jeff Borland. Vincenzo Quadrini and Dean Corbae both resigned and were replaced with Nezih Gunner and Erwan Quintin. I thank all of the co-editors for their hard work, diligence, and expertise. Kaulene Gellerman has done terrific work serving as my administrative assistant and much of the success of the journal at improving performance despite heavy submissions is due to her.

Our strongest fields, based on submissions, are sports (24), health (23), and experimental (39). The economics of publishing, internet issues, and field experiments also attract a decent following. The miscellany section remains vibrant.

Table 1 shows the processing of manuscripts by year of submission.

Eighteen of the 485 papers submitted in 2009 and accepted as of May 2010 were revised once, while 34 were accepted on the initial submission. This is part of an explicit policy to reduce the number of rounds; papers that are close to acceptance are accepted with suggestions rather than required revisions. Four of these accepted papers required two revisions.

The backlog continues to worsen. There were 77 accepts issued in 2009 and 66 requests for revision. We have taken the following actions to reduce the backlog. First, I have set a target of 8% for acceptance, which would be 40 per year. Second, I have identified the co-editors with the highest non-reject rate and alerted them. Third, we have increased the size of the journal to work through some of the backlog. I will continue to work with the co-editors to moderate our acceptances. This is challenging primarily because referees use criteria formed primarily through historical experience.

Submissions remain strong. We had 485 submissions in 2008, a 117% increase over 2001-6 average. Processing has slowed over last year, but remains better than before. The average first decision for regular submissions was 96 days and 111 days for no revisions papers. Prior to 2007, acceptances averaged about 14 months.

The no revisions policy accounted for 31% of 2009 submissions, the same as 2008. The acceptance rate for no revisions manuscripts is higher than of the regular submissions.

I am especially grateful to the referees. Economic Inquiry requested 640 referees' reports, an increase of about 40% over 2006. However, when a decision can reasonably be made with fewer, we release and thank any remaining referees. The complete list is attached.

R. Preston McAfee, Editor
